

Can you bear this story?

The Ear Hears

MARK ON DEFENSE

Attorney Mark Mack is developing his reputation as a criminal defense lawyer these days.

A former assistant county prosecutor, Mack can work the other side of the fence too.

Most recently, Mack represented Michael Rinaldi, 20, of Wilkes-Barre. A jury found him not guilty of an allegation that he possessed an intended to sell cocaine.

Mack also represented Michael Rodriguez, Drums, charged with drunk driving.

The case ended in a stalemate when the prosecution was legally prevented from proceeding due to court rulings suppressing evidence and agreeing that probable cause for prosecution was lacking.

Mack recently relocated his offices from Wilkes-Barre to Kingston where he completely remodeled an old building on Pierce Street.

Mack's father, Attorney Tom Mack, was a former Luzerne County District Attorney in the late 1960's.